Annual Diocesan Appeal Supports the Least Among Us

This year, $450,000 of the dollars you donate to the Annual Diocesan Appeal enable Catholic Charities to provide programs to end the cycle of poverty and to create a culture of life. Read more on reverse side.

“When we reach out and help the poor through Catholic Charities, when we help one person, we also recognize and help to change and transform and save their family, that they can carry out the responsibility of the family life as well as receive the benefit that is part of family life for each and every one of us.”

Most Rev. Michael F. Olson, Bishop of Fort Worth

In Love and Justice

By assisting low-income students to complete college through Catholic Charities' Rural Vocation and Stay the Course™ partnerships.

If someone from a low-income background completes college, they have a 90 percent chance of bettering their economic situation.

The Rural Vocation program is designed to provide eligible students comprehensive support services to address problems that could impact the students' ability to successfully complete their education. In partnership with community colleges throughout the Diocese of Fort Worth, staff members from Catholic Charities work one-on-one with students to help them manage obstacles, access financial assistance, and create a path that helps each student make it to graduation. The program considers every factor that keeps someone from graduating – from reduced income to loss of household to medical emergencies – and providing social support that helps them succeed. Finally, the program also provides professional skills development, post-educational job placement, and retention support.

After initial success at community colleges in Tarrant, Wichita and Young Counties, Catholic Charities is implementing a plan to expand these services to 14 additional campuses throughout the Diocese within the next ten years, giving Catholic Charities a “bricks and mortar” presence in all eight deaneries of the Diocese.

In conjunction with the Wilson Sheehan Lab for Economic Opportunities at the University of Notre Dame, Catholic Charities is also using research to prove that these services really make a difference in helping low-income students persist in community college and complete their degrees. The Stay the Course™ program evaluates the intervention on two Tarrant County College campuses, and results show that Stay the Course™ students are two times more likely to stay in school, and female students are four times more likely to persist in their education.

“We are grateful for the support of the Annual Diocesan Appeal from the outset of this innovative program,” says John Moragues, MSSW, education specialist for Catholic Charities. If you would like more information about this initiative that is creating economic opportunities for low-income families, please contact Laura Sotelo at lsotelo@ccdofw.org.
